What the reviewers said...

"I've had to do my own share of moves over the years and like most people learned what to do the hard way. This book is a must for anyone making a move."

Ed Lincoln - Publishing Consultant

"This is just the kind of work we set up The Endless Bookcase for - someone like Pamela Hatswell with valuable experiences of dealing with one of life's challenges sharing with others the lessons she's learned. Although some of what it tells you may seem obvious and common sense it's surprising how often people miss such things until it's too late."

Carl French - Editor

Are you...

- about to buy a home?
- leaving rented accommodation?
- selling your home?
- going to live abroad?
- moving into a new home near your family?
- moving into rented accommodation?
- a student leaving home for university accommodation?
- a student “living out” for the first time?
- or leaving your home to move into warden assisted accommodation or a care home?
- or – something else?

In all cases, this little guide might just help you get through a stressful occasion

Please note.

I am not going to discuss matters relating to estate agents, surveyors, solicitors or mortgage advisors, but I am going to talk about practical things you can be doing both before and after your move.

At the end of the booklet I have provided a check list and I hope that if you think of anything else you will let me know so that this information keeps up to date and informative for all situations.

About the Author

Pamela Hatswell moved to London and started sharing a flat straight after College. Flatmates came and went and flats were exchanged for better ones to match her income until she married an RAF pilot and moved with the postings. When the marriage ended she moved again and then re-married and moved. Her husband was made redundant and – they moved - to run a family business. The business was sold and this necessitated another move until finally she found her present home and fulfilled her wish to live by the sea, in sunshine and work from home.
